

Defense Counsel Asks Dismissal Of Hines' Charges

Stryker Says Tammany District Leader Only 'One of Players' in Schultz Racket, Not 'Master Mind'

Cites 36 Cases

Says Policy Not Lottery and Therefore 'Not Subject' to Provisions of Law

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Defense Counsel today urged dismissal of conspiracy charges against James J. Hines, 61-year-old Tammany district leader, asserting that even on the basis of the state's accusations, Hines was only "one of the players on the team," not a "master mind" of the $20,000,000-a-year Dutch Schultz policy racket.

By this legal strategy, Lloyd Paul Stryker, Hines' attorney, sought to prevent the four-week trial from reaching the "blue ribbon" jury.

Stryker asked Justice Ferdinand Pecora for dismissal of the indictment in a 27-page typewritten brief. He cited three major legal points in moving that the 13 counts in the indictment against Hines be thrown out.

He also cited 36 cases in support of his thesis, and in a pre-trial interview, the booming-voiced chief defense lawyer was emphatic in stating that it was no "defense tactic" of a "rotten formal nature," but that he sincerely believed the case should be quashed "on the law and the facts."

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey has indicated that in contrast to the three hours Stryker said he would require for oral argument on his brief, the prosecution would only need "about 15 minutes" to answer it.

The state rested last yesterday, after climaxing its maze of circumstantial evidence with testimony that Hines, as alleged political "fixer" for the Schultz mob, attempted to save "the Dutchman" from being "pushed around" by police in Troy, N. Y., and that Hines agreed to look in on the pending appointment of Dewey as a special racket prosecutor in 1935.

In his legal challenge to the case, Stryker declared that even adopting the state's assumption that Hines was an accessory, his client could not be tried for conspiracy within the definition of the law.

Stryker's major contentions were—That counts two to 13 in the indictment, covering felonies, should be dismissed because the evidence failed to prove that Hines "contrived or assisted in contriving a lottery" within the meaning of Section 1372 of the Penal laws.

Two—That the prosecution failed to establish that the alleged offenses were committed within the statutory period of limitations, pointing out that the first count was a misdemeanor with a two-year statutory limitation.

Three—That the People failed to prove the alleged conspiracy. Stryker argued that if Hines were being tried for corruption or obstructing justice, the case might justly be submitted to the jury.

Since the charge does not come within that category, he continued, "the entire indictment should be dismissed."

Prosecutor Dewey also submitted a brief to Justice Pecora, insisting that the evidence proved the conspiracy, that Hines was one of the conspirators, and that all 13 counts were valid.

Dewey declared that the state's evidence was "remarkably direct in its nature" and "conclusively stamps the defendant Hines and the other conspirators named during the trial as members of the Schultz mob."

Dewey's brief covered 26 pages and cited as many cases as the defense.

Stryker argued: "It is perfectly apparent that our appellate courts have uniformly stated that distinction exists between policy and lottery." He claimed that since Hines was indicted on lottery charges, whereas the illicit Schultz gambling syndicate was a policy or "numbers game" enterprise, the case should be dismissed.

"If Pompey, Ison, etc.," he said, "referring to Alexander Pompey, or 'Spasm' Ison and other Harlem policy bankers in the Schultz mob, were indicted on lottery charges, they would be indicted on lottery charges, not on policy charges."

While a prisoner in the Tombs after his capture in a Philadelphia hide-out last February, Hines was confident he could "beat his rap" because, he said, Dewey's indictment was based on "wrong grounds."

Bishop Donahue Takes Temporary Charge of Diocese

THE MOST REV. S. J. DONAHUE

The Very Rev. Monsignor John J. Stanley of St. Mary's Church was sub-deacon at a Mass this morning at 10:30 o'clock in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, read for the late Patrick Cardinal Hayes by the Most Rev. Stephen J. Donahue, Bishop Donahue, according to the Associated Press, today took up the duties of Cardinal Hayes, who was his friend and teacher.

Monsignor Stanley along with his assistants at St. Mary's Church, the Revs. William H. Kennedy and James P. Moore, will attend the final services tomorrow for Cardinal Hayes at St. Patrick's Cathedral and will be seated in the sanctuary.

Bishop Donahue, who is 44 years old, served as auxiliary bishop to Cardinal Hayes. He was born in the Hall's Kitchen area of New York December 10, 1893, and rose to his present honored position in the Catholic Church from the city's tenement districts.

Bishop Donahue was elected administrator of the archdiocese yesterday, subject to approval of the Vatican. His selection came as thousands stood outside St. Patrick's Cathedral, awaiting their turn to pass the purple-draped bier of Cardinal Hayes.

Police estimated more than 100,000 mourners had filed past the bier of the 70-year-old prelate, who will be buried in a crypt beneath the altar Friday after a solemn requiem Mass.

His association began when student Donahue was graduated at the age of 12 into Cathedral College, of which the then Father Hayes was president. Father Hayes presented him with a medal for general excellence on completion of his six-year course at the college.

He won a scholarship to the North American College in Rome and was ordained there in May, 1918, by the late Cardinal Pompili, vicar of Rome.

In 1920 Father Donahue became assistant secretary to Cardinal Hayes and a year later became a monsignor. He was created a monsignor in 1924 and a bishop in 1934.

Film Craftsmen Charge Bribe Of $100,000; Appeal to NLRB

Los Angeles, Sept. 8 (AP)—Bitter dissension among film craftsmen flared today in a complaint to the National Labor Relations Board that payment of a $100,000 bribe to a union official put 12,000 union workers under "direct control" of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc.

Pat Casey, labor mediator of the producers' organization, immediately branded the complaint as "ridiculous," and said:

"If these unions were company unions, do they think they could have gotten from 25 to 35 per cent increases in pay during the past three or four years?"

Government Asks $700,000,000 From Investors Today

'New Money' Would Help Pay for New Deal Spending Program and Build Up Temporary Cash Reserve

'No Emergency'

Secretary Morgenthau Denies Size of Borrowing Influenced by War Scare

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—The treasury asked the nation's investors today to lend it $700,000,000 in "new money" to help pay for the administration's spending program and to build up a huge temporary cash reserve.

At the same time, Secretary Morgenthau offered new securities to refund $433,460,900 worth of notes maturing December 15, bringing the total of the financing operation to $1,133,460,900.

Treasury officials said they anticipated little difficulty in borrowing the money because the banks alone have $3,000,000,000 of idle funds available for investments and loans.

The proceeds of the financing and of quarterly income tax payments, due next week, will give the treasury a cash working balance of about $2,500,000,000—one of the largest in history and five times what is considered necessary in normal times.

With this much cash on hand, the treasury would be able to go for many months without new borrowing if an emergency upset the money markets.

There was no official indication, however, that this had been a factor in the decision on the fiscal program.

Denies "Emergency"

On the contrary, Morgenthau denied flatly that the size of the borrowing was influenced by the possibility of a European war event which might paralyze capital markets temporarily.

In treasury circles it was suggested that the reason was a desire to take advantage of current low interest rates in the money market.

This explanation was bolstered by the fact that the interest rates on the 12 to 14 year 2 1/2 per cent bonds and 4 1/2 years 1 1/2 per cent notes offered by the treasury are as low as ever offered before.

Proponents of the "cheap money" explanation pointed out that since business appears to be on the up-grade, private enterprises might soon be competing with the treasury for capital in the money markets and interest rates might rise.

Secretary of Commerce Roper said yesterday that "reports from various segments of trade, industry and commerce indicate that the steady processes of recovery, which had been effective since about mid-June, are continuing."

Roper added that, although it was difficult to judge trends in between the summer and fall seasons, retail trade already has shown a fall-type pickup since Labor Day.

The banking situation faced by the Treasury in its borrowing was described by the federal reserve board as one in which "at the present time the country's volume of deposits is near the all-time peak reached at the end of 1935, while the turnover of these deposits is at the slowest rate on record."

Individuals and businesses, the board explained, have about $47,500,000,000 on deposit, but so far this year have made comparatively little use of their liquid funds.

The treasury borrowing will send the direct federal debt to the unprecedented total of $38,300,000,000, or $22,000,000,000 more than it was at its post-war low on December 31, 1930.

Sudeten German Officials Won't Renew Conferences Until Whipping Is Settled; France Rushes Reserves to Border Area

Citizens of Metz Awake Today to Find Themselves in Midst of French Observation Activities Near Line

Prayers for Peace

French Reservists Arrive at Maginot Border—Women Throng Churches

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, Jr.

Sarrequeimines, on the French-German frontier, Sept. 8 (AP)—France's air and land armies in the Maginot zone watched movements of German troops across the frontier today and awaited developments in Czechoslovakia.

Citizens of Metz awake today to see a large army observation balloon flying at the end of a cable high above the city. Two observers in the basket scanned the northern horizon with field glasses and kept in constant touch by telephone with a ground crew.

French observation and pursuit planes roared over valleys of the Maginot line of fortifications long before the morning fog had lifted.

During the night, troops in the fortresses were strengthened by thousands of trained reserves. Constant watch was kept in the garrisons and at entrances to the underground fortifications.

By the time the night watch was relieved the drone of airplanes overhead told the land force that the air army also had taken their posts.

Candles of Peace

Little parish churches of the frontier zone were lit this morning by hundreds of candles placed before the altars by devout Lorraine women.

Throughout Alsace and Lorraine—areas that felt the full brunt of the World War—the last few days thousands of women of the frontier zone have flocked into Metz and Strasbourg cathedrals and hundreds of parish churches. They said many a prayer for peace and burned many a candle.

The cream of the French continental forces and reserve reinforcements, an estimated 350,000 men in all, waited for orders in the fortified Maginot zone.

Throughout the night reservists in civilian clothes left special trains from the rear and vanished into the log that filled valleys and the heavily-guarded hills of the frontier area.

The young civilians who were called hastily to the colors needed no introduction to the chain of underground forts and domed casemates of the famed Maginot line.

In Service Recently

Most of them completed their military service in the northern or eastern zone within the last three years. They went directly to stations "somewhere on the line," changed immediately into uniforms and resumed their places in the French war machine.

Only a few of their officers stepped off the special trains at Nancy and Metz, 40 miles west of Sarrequeimines.

The Rhine river, rising slightly during the night, lapped at bases of the new Siegfried line of forts spreading along the German side of the stream from Lauterbourg to the Swiss border.

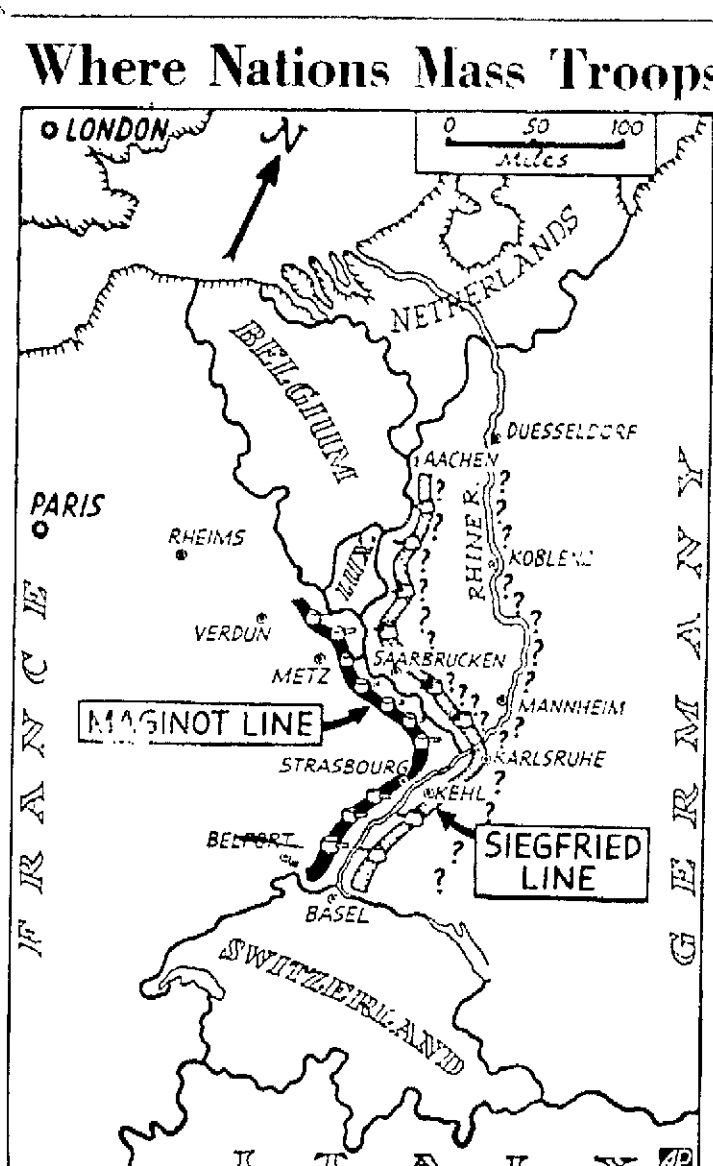

French troops in the casemates on the opposite bank watched the movement of the German units which only recently occupied the fortifications.

At many points along the Rhine and along the winding northern frontier through the Saar Valley, small units of French and German troops were close enough to talk.

Little Conversation

There were few exchanges of conversation, however, because the French soldiers assigned to posts on the actual frontier are almost all from central France and speak no German.

Bilingual customs guards whose normal equipment includes only revolvers carried carbines at several frontier posts.

As the world anxiously awaited the outcome of the Czechoslovakian crisis, France and Germany clamped down rigorous "anti-espionage" regulations along their border. The map shows the Maginot and Siegfried lines of fortifications. Reports reached France of two other defense lines backing up the Siegfried line on the German side (indicated by rows of interrogation points)—a "Hindenburg" line and a third line, unnamed, along the Rhine, on which Germany supposedly was working.

Business Men to Give Three Essay Prizes at Annual Fall Opening

Instead of Awarding Trophies to Merchants, Association Has Decided to Donate Equivalent to Public

Three prizes will be awarded by the Kingston Business Men's Association at the annual Fall Opening Display which will take place this year on Thursday, September 22. The prizes will be awarded for the best essays written in a contest open to the general public. All that will be required is to write a twenty-five word essay on why a particular window is considered best.

To the writer of the best essay will be awarded $15 in cash, second prize will be $10 and the third prize will be $5. Prominent persons will be selected to act as judges.

In the past the merchants' association awarded cups to the individual merchant whose window was considered best by the judges. This year the Kingston Business Men's Association has decided to award the prizes to the public.

A plan has been devised whereby the person who submits an essay will attach a coupon to his or her essay. As the essays are received the coupon and essay will be numbered with a corresponding number, the coupon will be filed away and the essay turned over to the judges without a signature attached. This will assure absolute impartial action in the judging. The prize winning essays will be identified by the attached number by the judges.

At a committee meeting held Wednesday afternoon it was decided that the unveiling of the windows should take place Thursday evening as has been customary but the windows will remain on display for the balance of the week and may be viewed by contestants through Saturday evening. All essays postmarked before midnight Monday, September 26, will be considered by the judges.

The names of the prize winners together with their winning essays will be published.

Plans for other attractions for the opening night of the Fall Display were discussed and left to separate committees to work out. In past years the annual Fall Opening has attracted thousands of people to the Kingston business center to witness the initial display of fall merchandise and again this year Kingston merchants will give the public that opportunity on September 22.

Stand Taken by Sudeten Germans Apparently Conflicts With Hitler's Orders to Resume Negotiations—Incident Arises Near Polish-German Frontier Was Policeman Hits German

U. S. Spy Probe

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—The government has sent two attorneys and a federal agent abroad in an attempt to obtain testimony from a key witness in the nation's most widespread spy investigation since the World War.

This unusual step was announced by U. S. District Attorney Luman Hardy, who said the commission would seek to question Dr. Ignatz T. Grubel, former U. S. army medical officer, under indictment on espionage charges.

Federal Judge Murray Hallbert recently issued an order for the questioning which can be done only if Dr. Grubel gives his written consent. The order was issued on motion of George C. Day, attorney for Johanna Holmann, former half-sister of the Ruer Europa.

The woman is under indictment on espionage charges and with three others will go on trial October 1.

Hardy said the three-man commission composed of Assistant U. S. Attorneys, Lester C. Juntkan and John W. Burke, Jr., and John T. McLaughlin, wanted to question Dr. Grubel particularly on his statement in behalf of Miss Holmann.

Labor Serves Notice

London, Sept. 8 (AP)—British labor today served on the government a formal demand that parliament be summoned as soon as possible to consider the deepening anxieties of the European situation.

Clement R. Attlee, leader of the labor opposition in the House of Commons, presented this demand to Prime Minister Chamberlain as Chamberlain and other members of the "inner cabinet" gathered in London to study the Central European crisis.

Attlee acted in pursuance of a resolution adopted at Blackpool last night by a joint meeting of the national executive of the Labor Party, the executive of the Parliamentary Labor Party and the General Council of the Trades Union Congress—the high command of labor.

Parliament recessed July 29 for three weeks.

Harassed by a critical breakdown of negotiations between Czechoslovakia and German minority, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain hurried back from a vacation in Scotland to meet for the first time since his return to office, John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Treasury Receipts

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—The position of the treasury September 6 receipts: $24,872,755.47; expenditures: $25,714,361.11; net balance: $2,841,606.36, including $1,592,712,252.49 working balance; customs receipts for the month: $5,479,758.80. Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $865,956,776.37; expenditures: $1,613,164,337.27, including $191,325,578.83 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures: $747,207,560.92; gross debt: $27,529,364,961.27, an increase of $2,997,146.47 above the previous day; gold assets: $12,219,892,977.61.

German efforts will now be concentrated upon getting the British to act quickly and decisively, these sources added.

Germany's patience with the British and the Czechoslovaks in negotiations for German minority rights in Czechoslovakia is near its end, a general well aware of events said today.

"We never will make war on the Czechs," the general told this writer at the Nazi party convention here, "but if the line of our German brethren are not at the day may come when we will consider that the Czechs have started a war with us."

"In such a case, of course, we shall remember that at attack is the best method of defense."

Grave Developments

He spoke in the light of the grave developments in the crisis. Action by a Czech mounted policeman who rode into a noisy crowd in Nuremberg-Ostrava, near the German and Polish borders with Czechoslovakia, and Germans said, struck with his riding crop the shoulders of a Sudeten German legislator.

The decision by Sudeten German party leaders to break negotiations with the Prague government because of the March 1938 incident, which the Czech government promised to investigate thoroughly.

A decision attributed to Chancellor Hitler now to deal more exclusively with Britain over the Sudeten demands for autonomy from Prague.

The statement by a high government spokesman, speaking privately that Hitler in effect had instructed Konrad Henlein, Sudeten party leader, not to accept the latest and supposedly "final" offer of concessions from the Prague government and advised him to "ask for more and you'll get it."

Returns to Czechoslovakia

Henlein came here to confer with the chancellor but started back to Czechoslovakia last night (Continued on Page 20)

Air Line Operators Drafting Program Designed for Safety

Chicago, Sept. 8 (AP)—Air line operators, after conferring with the newly created Civil Aeronautics Authority, set to work today drafting a program designed to promote safety in air transportation.

Ralph Damon, vice president in charge of operations of American Airlines, was named chairman of the committee to formulate the program outlined yesterday at the closing session of the Aeronautics Authority's two-day meeting. It will be ratified by the safety board of the CAA before September 25.

Damon said the program will include the following points: Changes in flight schedules to allow flying at slower speeds.

Agreement on flying at reduced throttle—50 per cent instead of 65 per cent of available power—in order to provide a greater power reserve at all times, to reduce wear on engines, and to increase engine reliability.

Adoption of a set of field weather regulations so that one line will not operate trips in types of weather in which other operators refuse to fly.

Closer cooperation on weather reporting, engineering, radio, traffic, and advertising.

Rockefeller Asks Filing of Names

Lewis K. Rockefeller, Representative of the 17th Congressional District of New York, announced today that West Point cadets and Annapolis midshipmen from this district are due to graduate in 1939, and that other young men residing in this Congressional District will be nominated to take their places next year.

Mr. Rockefeller stated that many young men have already expressed their desire to be considered for those appointments, and that he has arranged with the United States civil service commission to conduct a preliminary examination on October 1 of this year for the purpose of designating nominees.

He stated that it has been the custom in this district ever since the World War to fill vacancies at the Academies by nominating for appointments those who attain the highest ratings in their qualifying examinations, and it is expected that this custom will be continued. For each appointment the Congressman will be permitted to make a principal and first and second alternate nomination. Those nominated will be permitted to take the final examination next spring given by the Military and Naval Academies.

Any young man between the ages of 17 and 21, who is a bona fide resident of this Congressional District, and who desires to take the preliminary examination on October 1 should communicate at once with Congressman Rockefeller, who will be glad to send complete information regarding the requirements.

Extraordinary Powers

Sanitago, Chile, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Senate last night approved extraordinary powers for 25 days for the government to deal with circumstances created by the short-lived Nazi revolt here Monday six months' powers had been asked. The measure now goes to the chamber.

Cheers rang from afar for Tony Galento, heavyweight boxer, who was recently "floored" by various illness. The Orange, N. J. pugilist received many telephone calls from all sections of the country—two coming from Max Baer, ex-heavyweight champion and Bill Brown, New York Boxing Commissioner, who telephoned their congratulations from the West Coast.

Small Residences Lead Recovery of Building Industry

Modest Homes in Demand As City People Move To Suburbs.

MINNEAPOLIS — Homebuilders are finding on hundreds of small homes across the country, as residential building volume approaches last year's pace, according to a survey of home building activity in 69 large and small cities by Northwestern National Life Insurance Company.

The home costing between $4,000 and $6,000 is king of the current building recovery; small homes are selling readily in most cities, while houses at $8,000 and up are hard to dispose of. City populations are surging into the outskirts, into suburban and unincorporated areas, the survey shows, while apartment construction languishes.

Of the 69 cities covered in the survey, 27 report increases in current residential building activity over last year, ranging from modest to vigorous in intensity. Another 14 cities report activity approximately equal to that of last year, while 28 report residential building below the pace of a year ago, but some of these find that inquiries and projected activity are definitely on the increase. The best comparative showings are being made in the southern and western sections, while eastern cities generally are making poorer comparisons with last year's residential building activity.

Costs Going Up. Meanwhile, building costs are climbing steadily and are already above 1937 average levels in most localities. In 10 out of 20 major cities, residential building costs for mid-summer were above the peak prices of 1937, at which last year's impending boom flattened and died, the report shows. The ten cities are: New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Birmingham, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, Kansas City, and Dallas. In five cities—Minneapolis, Kansas City, Denver, Seattle and San Francisco, residential building costs are above 1936-29 boom-time levels, and in Pittsburgh they are approximately at the 1926-29 level.

Though many of the realtors, mortgage bankers and title company executives co-operating in the survey feel that present high costs threaten the continuance of the current home building recovery, others believe that builders and the buying public are getting "acclimated" to a higher cost level, and feel that a sound business advance with its greater security of jobs will be the deciding factor.

Trend to Suburbs. The movement to suburban and unincorporated areas outside city limits is notable and widespread, the survey finds, and in some sections it threatens serious depreciation of values in established residential districts inside city boundaries. Larger homesites obtainable beyond city limits, greater quiet, and freedom from city realty taxes, are the principal attractions.

From a January volume of residential building which was only 46 per cent of the January, 1937, figure, 1938 activity has steadily gained on last year's rate, with June building permits reaching 96 per cent of the June, 1937, volume. The fact that dollar volume of June residential building projects was slightly greater than the May figures, when ordinarily there is a seasonal decline, is also emphasized in the report as one of the bright omens. Furthermore the June dollar volume was the greatest of any month since June, 1937, and the number of individual residential buildings under construction or contracted for actually exceeded the June '37, figures by 7 per cent, the report points out.

Firemen Answer Call Half Year Too Late

LAHORE, INDIA. — When a house caught fire in a Punjab state the owner sent an urgent letter to the state fire brigade as there was no telephone.

The chief fire brigade officer acknowledged the letter and left it for his successor, as he was going on leave.

The successor arrived about five months later, found it was a case for "immediate" attention and forwarded it to the Dewan (minister) "for favor of necessary action."

The Dewan in turn submitted the request to the ruler for "favor of immediate sanction."

The ruler ordered that the state fire brigade "proceed forthwith to the scene of the occurrence to avoid further damage to the building."

When the fire brigade arrived at the scene a new building had sprung up in place of the one destroyed six months earlier.

Fans reading about "Singin' Sam" Leslie, Giants' stalwart pitcher, might expect him to burst into song on the slightest vacation. Matter of fact, Sam's voice has nothing to do with his nickname. The sobriquet refers to a miraculous river which meanders past his native heath, Moss Point, Miss., a river that "sings" when the evening mists drift in from the moss-garlanded gulf coast lowlands.

Snyder Addresses Rotary About the European Crisis

Frederic Snyder of 34 Lucas avenue, world traveler and lecturer, and a member of the Kingston Rotary Club, gave one of his memorable talks at the luncheon meeting of the local club at the Governor Clinton Wednesday noon. The announcement that he was to be the speaker at this week's meeting brought out every member who could be present and in addition there were host a dozen visiting Rotarians and about 50 other guests.

Out of town members of the organization present were Howard News of Bay Shore, N. Y., Arthur Elmendorf of Newburgh, C. W. Golding of Poughkeepsie, J. A. T. O'Brien of New York, Mayor Wendell Phillips of Port Jervis and Emil L. Lactan of St. Petersburg, Fla.

President Eugene W. Pemberton announced that the meeting scheduled for September 21 would be held on Monday, September 19, on which date the Governor of Rotary would be present. A further announcement that a member of the club, Treasurer Arthur C. Connelly, was seriously ill at his home on Albany avenue, brought forth many expressions of regret.

The speaker of the day, who was introduced by William O'Reilly, had recently returned from a trip abroad, during which he visited England, Germany, France, Italy, Greece and Africa. He was listened to with the close attention he always receives as he discussed briefly the general situation in world affairs from what he had seen and what he had been able to learn.

Mr. Snyder prefaced his talk with the statement that he had little that could be called optimistic to offer and that so far as bringing any good tidings, "There are no good tidings," he repeated a statement formerly made to Kingston audiences to the effect that the World War has never ended. "This is the 25th year of the World War," he said, adding that today witnesses the Armistice destroyed and the Treaty of Versailles a thing of the past.

As to the imminence of actual war in central Europe the speaker said, "Your guess is as good as mine as to when war will come." He expressed the belief, however, that war would not arise from the Czech crisis, at least so far as Great Britain and France are concerned, but that it and when it does come it will be from sources little suspected at present.

In case of a war involving Germany, Mr. Snyder expressed the belief that one of the first objectives of her opponents would be the immediate destruction of Berlin and that Germany would have an entirely different experience from that of the World War, when German territory remained untouched.

Speaking of Hitler and conditions in Germany, the speaker said that in one sense or another every German today was "in prison." Among those actually incarcerated within prison walls or concentration camps he mentioned some 600 Lutheran ministers, representing the former state religion of Germany, many priests, nuns and others who have incurred the displeasure of Hitler. The latter was described as superstitious, vain and self-centered and "one of nature's accidents buttoned into a uniform." He said that he believed that Hitler would dominate the news for some time yet to come, but that in dealing with him they were "dealing entirely with a mad man."

Mr. Snyder saw Holland as the real danger spot of today. "Holland," said he, "is definitely 'on the spot.'" As to coming events, he predicted that October would be the most dangerous month and much depended upon the course of affairs between now and the end of October.

It was not the things that, generally, make the headlines, that are to be most feared, in Mr. Snyder's opinion, but the "secret" things. Among such he mentioned silent airplanes, propelled bombs and other advances in the science of warfare. Germany, he said, lacks many of these things today.

Concluding the speaker urged that in these days of uncertainty his hearers cling to those things which are certain and to keep their faith in such things as the principles represented by Rotary, in democracy, in the family system and in America.

MEXICAN EXCUSES

Up until the seizure of the property of Americans in Mexico became acute, the good neighbor policy adopted by our country toward its Latin-American brethren seemed to be going along quite well. The nation received another slight shock recently when it was announced in the newspapers that Secretary of State Hull had been compelled to send a sharper note to Mexico asking that the seizure of property belonging to Americans be halted and the Mexican government make some move toward the payment of Americans for the property forcibly taken from them. Mr. Hull pointed out that since 1927 ten million dollars worth of farm property has been forcibly taken away from American citizens and he repeated that taking property without force is not expropriation but confiscation.

The Mexican government used as an excuse that it had no money to reimburse Americans whose property had been taken but that it needed the property for financial reasons and therefore had the right to grab it without paying for it.

Mr. Hull asserted that this is the first time such a doctrine has been seriously asserted in the Western Hemisphere. The Secretary of State asks: "If such a policy were to be generally followed what citizens of one republic making his living in any of the other twenty republics of the Western Hemisphere could have any assurance from one day to the next that he and his family would not be evicted from their home and bereft of all means of livelihood."

There is no getting away from the logic of Mr. Hull's answer to the Mexican excuses. In fact, if a nation has a right to seize property of alien nationals without compensation because it "needs the property," how far different is this excuse from that of the burglar who takes another man's goods without compensation because he says he needs the loot?

Equity and logic are, of course, all on the side of the United States in this question of Mexican expropriation. The government and the people of the United States have been sincere in wanting to be neighbors to Mexico. Evidently, however, their attitude has little impressed the radical Mexican government which has seized on our overtures to strengthen a belief that we are easy marks and would do nothing about it if the property of our nationals were confiscated.

HIGHWAY SAFETY EDUCATION

One educational development of great value that is becoming increasingly more popular is the effort now being made to educate the public in highway safety. Many schools are explaining to children how to conduct themselves and to protect one another on the highways. Youngsters from five years and on are learning to take seriously photographs, motion pictures, and models of street intersections. When they reach the Boy Scout age they are given the responsibility, in many localities, of seeing that the younger children are safe at crossings. Certain high schools are beginning to give driving lessons with dual-operated cars, the instructor at one set of controls, the student at the other. This school driving, however, is still in the experimental stage.

The safety does not stop with the oncoming generation of drivers, however. Some of the states are undertaking to educate the older car owners. Many of them have grown habitually accustomed to faulty brakes, engines, tires and lights, and do not appreciate the hazards they run nor the danger they inflict on others.

Those who are endeavoring to make the public highway safety conscious deserve the cooperation of all good citizens.

SCHOLARLY FLYERS

Air travelers often notice the unusual quality of pilots, as shown by their manners, speech and range of information, but the fact is easily explained. It appears that a big majority of them are college men, and the others usually have considerable education and culture. High standards are demanded. It is not necessary, though, to accept literally the statement of a personnel director in Chicago, who says: "If you have any doubts about the ability of the pilots of a modern air transport plane to sound his broad A, give the square root of an isosceles triangle or delve into the ancient lore of the Roman Empire, you don't know that most of these men were fraternity members and honor students." Honors, no doubt; but broad A's, fraternity life and ancient learning have little to do with it.

A high degree of character, also, seems to go with flying. Consider that aviator, who, knowing he was going to crack, managed to steer his plane down a straight street, away from houses and playing children. He landed, near death, in the hospital but the children and their homes are safe.

It seems queer that nobody has suggested solving all our economic problems by everybody taking six-month vacations.

Secretary Hull may wear out the rest of the world yet, with his patient, seven-point programs.

Man at last is beating nature. A lightning stroke is nothing to a ton of TNT dropped from the clouds.

Public polls are getting too scientific. Some surprises ought to be left for election day.

The next job of the WPA is to chisel out the chiselers.

 THE DIFFERENCE CAUSES OF ECZEMA

As medical students we learned the symptoms of eczema in children and that ordinary zinc ointment was a good method of treatment. Just what caused the eczema was not definitely known but it was believed that some skins were more sensitive than others and also that food might be a factor also.

Today, as eczema is still the commonest form of skin ailment, a close study of its cause and treatment is being made in clinics throughout the world.

In the clinic of Dr. J. E. Swartz, Massachusetts General Hospital, infantile eczema is divided into two types:

1. The type found only on the face.
2. The type that involves the scalp, face, in front of ear, behind the ear, arms and legs, and the small of the back. It is this type that is found later in the bend of the elbow and knee.

The first type shows a chapped-like condition of the face and is due to exposure to sun, wind, and soaps and water.

The second type is more complicated and is classified as follows:

- (a) Sensitization eczema—skin sensitive or allergic to substances from within and without.
- (b) Mycotic eczema—due to an organism.
- (c) Combined sensitization and mycotic eczema.

In the first or "sensitiveness" class due to skin sensitiveness, the substance causing the eczema may come in contact with the skin direct, or it may come by means of the blood to the skin. By the use of skin and other tests it has been found that the most offending foods in order of importance are eggs, milk, wheat, barley, spinach, oats, beef, corn, potato, and tomato.

It has also been found that if the patient is sensitive to cow's milk, he is, as a rule, sensitive to other forms of milk such as goat's milk. Treatment is to locate the food or other substance and leave it out of the diet.

In the second class or mycotic eczema, the organism causing the eczema is usually found in the mother's hands. This means that the mother's hands must be treated at the same time as the baby.

In the third or combined class (sensitiveness and an organism), the treatment, of course, would be to cut out of the organism and to test for the offending foods or other substances.

I am not mentioning the various ointments used in the clinic because a baby with a chronic eczema should be under the care of a physician at home or at a clinic.

Allergy

"What is one man's food is another man's poison" is an old saying but the truth of it is being proved almost daily by research physicians throughout the world. Some individuals are sensitive to foods and other substances and will have easily seen, asthma, headache, pains in stomach when they eat these foods. The Characters
 Hugo Stern, handsome author, living on the French Riviera.
 Archie Lammson, myself, Hugo's friend.
 Heidi Geiss, cartoonist and murderer of Hugo.
 Otilie Willis, beautiful American friend.

Yesterday, disregarding Hugo's warning, Otilie poses for Geiss. We go after her.

Chapter 22

First Fetters Of Love

"GET up!" Hugo said harshly. "You're coming back with us at once. Your uncle is waiting for you."

"Uncle?" she said on a different note. "Goodness! Is he getting fretful too? Well, in that case, I'd better be going. Mr. Geiss," she said, "I fancy we'll have to call it a day. It's been a lovely party, and I'd certainly like to come again."

As she spoke, she flashed a mocking, impish look at Hugo, and I heard him swear under his breath. I could not blame him, for that girl, when she set her mind to do it, could have irritated an archangel, and yet she was such a lovely sight as she stood silhouetted against the dark hangings that I, for one, felt my rage fading away.

The cartoonist looked from one to the other of us, livid with fury. "Yes," he said slowly. "You will come again, and you are quite right—there will be no interruption." He took a step nearer, staring at her intently with his opaque eyes. "Stranger," he said, "never before have I used a model that so inspired me. Yet I have never studied you before." He drew a hand across his eyes. "It is like a remembered dream," he added, half to himself.

The girl caught her breath. "I guess it must have been a dream," she said uncertainly, and as she spoke Hugo picked up the thick white woolen wrap that lay on the floor, and threw it across her shoulders.

"That's enough," he said harshly. "Come along out of this!"

He led her through the door and down the passage. As we reached the hall there came a sudden interruption. Cassandra Chubb leaped from her chair by the door and rushed at us, emitting a stifled squeak of fury mixed with relief.

"Well!" she said. "Otilie Willis, all the ways to act!"

"Don't, Chubby," said the girl. "Don't you start saying I've got plenty of that coming from other quarters!" She gave a half-apologetic, half-mischievous glance at Hugo. "You're mad with me, aren't you?" she added, naively questioning him.

Hugo moved impatiently. "To be angry with anyone," he told her, "presupposes a certain regard or respect. This last effort of yours so completely passes the bounds of reason that all I can feel is a profound pity for the people who are obliged to look after you."

The girl caught her breath sharply. Her dark eyes flashed daggers at him, and even Miss Chubb at my side gasped in a shocked way.

"My, my!" she said. "On the pavement Otilie turned her air subdued, her expression all meekness. 'Shall I go straight home,' she asked, 'or shall I tell you what I found out? Once we get together with Uncle, there'll be no more private talking.'"

"Oh, Hugo!" she said, "that your news will be worth the trouble and anxiety your visit has caused."

She looked up at him quickly, musingly yet apprehensive, then drew a deep breath and folded her hands. "Well," she said, "first and foremost, he's asked me to visit a thing called the bureau. It's a sort of fact and they hold it next Sunday. He asked whether I bring my uncle along, and I said he couldn't walk, because of a lame foot, but that didn't seem to worry Mr. Geiss. All he was concerned about was that I should be there."

"That's simple," I said. "He gets you planted somewhere as the decoy duck, and sends an urgent call to your uncle. What did you say?"

"She grinned impishly. 'I acted the bashful maiden,' she said. 'Didn't know if I could go out with him alone, but let him see I'd love to. That's how it stands at the moment. Second,' she checked off an item on her fingers, 'a friend of his has a yacht which is expected in the harbor tomorrow. She's a seagoing boat, and the friend may shortly take a long cruise in her. He's invited me for a sail in her on Saturday afternoon.'"

"I whistled. 'That's interesting. I presume she belongs to either Stahl or Rakovsky, but what's she there for?'"

"In case their plans miscarry," said Hugo. His manner was still stiff and formal, but I could see a glint of interest in his eyes. "The yacht is registered under a foreign flag, it would be an admirable way of getting away in a hurry."

The girl nodded slowly. "I guessed that," she agreed. "But why, unless the man's a lunatic, did he tell me about her?"

"Because, my dear," said I, "in the first place, he doesn't know that you—or we, for that matter—guess a thing about the plot. He doesn't know who your sister was, or O'Donoghue either, and he thinks she's being very clever. Probably if you finally refuse to go to the brotherly with him, he'll have a shot at holding you on board the yacht until your uncle's disposed of."

She gave me a quick, understanding smile. "That's how I'd figured it out myself. Well, that was all I heard, for he spent a lot of time being gallant, and the rest in finding out how I'd met Mr. Stern in the first place and in warning me to keep away from him. It appears," she added, turning solemn eyes on Hugo, "that you're a terrible philanthropist."

He flushed. "At least," he retorted, "you were able to deny that from your own experience. Archie, you can see Miss Willis back to her hotel and meet me later by the car." And with a stiff little bow he turned on his heel and marched off.

She stood for a moment watching his broad, blue-shirted back disappearing along the pavement. "There's gratitude for you!" she commented bitterly. Then, suddenly she laughed and, linking her arm in mine, drew me away in the opposite direction. "Tell me," she said confidentially, "when he's mad like that, how long does he take to get over it?"

"Sometimes an hour," I told her, "sometimes a month, and sometimes never."

She heaved a short sigh. "I guess it'll be never in my case," she said, and then, with an upward jerk of the chin, "Oh, well, who cares? Archie—you don't mind if I call you Archie, do you? Somehow I always think of you that way, though I couldn't ever call Mr. Stern Hugo. Not ever!" She finished with considerable emphasis.

"It's not so hard as you'd think," I assured her. "What is it you want to know?"

"I just wondered if he'd ever been in love. Somehow he doesn't strike me as having any human emotions."

I looked at her thoughtfully, and a sudden, surprising possibility struck me. "Oh, well," said I, "Hugo's a hard nut for any woman to crack. There's a lot of stand-back, keep-your-distance, about him, but you can't wonder at it. With his reputation as a writer and his looks, most women he meets seem to fall for him."

"Poor muts!" said she viciously, and the conversation came to an abrupt close.

Queer, Tingling Excitement
 I DELIVERED over a silent and thoughtful young woman to the care of Mr. George Willis. He was waiting for me in the Hispano's driving-seat, and as I settled myself beside him, I looked at him curiously.

I had by now a shrewd idea that Otilie Willis's interest in him was not entirely curious, but I had yet to determine whether the irritating, almost repulsive, quality of her protest of a confirmed bachelor against the first, unwelcome fetsers of love or merely the normal reaction of a staid man to the vagaries of modern youth.

But his stony face gave no hint of his feelings, and as we circled the port and approached the familiar building, my thoughts were irresistibly drawn back towards the chateau. I was conscious of a cloud descending on my mind, darkening the recollection of what had been, on the whole, a most cheerful day—but as well as the shadow, a queer tingling excitement was slowly creeping over me.

"Look here," I said, "drop me near the hotel. I must have a wash and brush up."

He obeyed in grim silence, and as I strolled down the lane and crossed the gravel sweep to the vestibule, I found myself chuckling. If peace and an ordered routine were what he demanded from life, he was certainly not getting them at the moment.

The long hall was empty, cool, and shadowed, and a liac duck veiled the terrace beyond, but as my footsteps echoed on the marble flagstones, the big dog rose from beneath the counter, slowly wagging his tail, and the servant Amadeo appeared from the corridor.

"Monsieur," he said anxiously, "the patron has awaited you since noon! He wishes to speak with you as soon as you return."

"With pleasure," said I, and on that he conducted me up in the lift to his master's apartments.

It was a strange little room in which I found myself as I opened the door, in answer to a fretful "Come in!" If the creator of the room had wished to reproduce, say, a small smoking-room in a well-to-do London residence, he couldn't have done better, but it would have belonged to a London of twenty years back.

The small, frail form of Mr. Venet was waiting on a long couch drawn before the window.

"Come over here!" he said impatiently. "Sit ye down and help yourself to a drink. What have you been up to, I should like to know, waiting about all day while I was gadding to have a talk with you, and a most important talk too!"

Misty Talk

WILLY NILLY took his crow's advice and beached the boat. At that moment all the Muddlers came toward him.

"We thought it was becoming misty," they barked and cackled and bleated and growled and quacked, "and we wanted to be sure you were safe."

The little man smiled. His animal friends were watching over him, taking care of him, giving him advice. Well, he needed it, too, at times.

They went back now to the trailer as they were planning to bring Willy Nilly's supper, and their own, down to the beach.

As they left a gull swooped down, not far from Willy Nilly. "Just helping myself to what I find on the beach," cack-cacked the gull.

"You're not fussy, are you?" asked Willy Nilly. "In fact you're quite ready to clean the beach by eating old fish heads or anything?"

"Well, not quite anything," said the gull. "My great, great grandfather told me once that he had heard people use the word 'gullible'."

"It meant that a person who would believe anything, or in other words swallow whatever was told them was like a gull who would swallow anything. Now a gull will swallow a great deal—but not everything so people use that word carelessly."

"Cack-cack-cack, gullible indeed!" But the gull did seem to be swallowing all he could find. He flew off but at that moment Top Nitch appeared.

"Gullible, gullible, gullible, cack-a-doodle-do. I've learned a new word. I know a thing or two."

Washington Daybook

By DR. L. S. ROWE

Director General of the Pan American Union

Guest Columnist for Preston (Crosby)

WASHINGTON—Peace in the Western Hemisphere is the business of every government in North and South America.

That principle was confirmed a few weeks ago when Bolivia and Paraguay decided to submit their Chaco war to arbitration, after a century of intermittent fighting.

Thus the conference method of settling international disputes triumphed again on this side of the Atlantic. Even now the family of American governments is preparing for another in the long line of Pan American conferences, this one to be held in Lima, Peru, early in December.

A glance at the record helps explain this comparative quiet on the American front despite the war clatter elsewhere in the world. It reads almost like "A Century of Progress."

A little more than a century ago, in 1826, Simon Bolivar, the Great Liberator, called a conference of nations which assembled in Panama. Although U. S. delegates arrived after the meeting adjourned, several Latin American representatives got together in time for a little friendly discussion.

By 1889 the first Pan American Conference met in Washington, D. C. It went so far as to establish a commercial bureau to foster trade relations between the American nations.

For Peace Association
 ALREADY the governing board of the Union has drafted the program for the coming Peru conference, after consultation with the governments which will attend.

Reunion Is Held Near Boiceville

West Shokan, Sept. 7.—The traditional outing of the Boiceville Association, which for many years has brought together native sons and daughters of the area, was held Monday in the pine grove on the former Lambert estate near Boiceville.

Case J. Gwynne was named the new president of the association by acclamation and Elwyn Davis was re-elected vice-president. Mr. Gwynne in accepting the honor said it was 20 years since he left the valley of the Ashokan reservoir.

Millard H. Davis of Kerhonkson opened the business meeting of the group in his inimitable way during the late afternoon. Other speakers included Arthur E. Trowbridge of the New York Department of Water Supply; Lemuel E. DuBois, supervisor of the town of Olive; and the Rev. William Bender, captain of the Gospel Army of the State of New York, who gave the invocation.

Secretary Davis read the minutes of the 1937 meeting and gave his report as treasurer. Retiring President Mart Avery was introduced and waved a greeting to the crowd.

A plan to build the organization along more permanent lines was outlined by Mr. Gwynne, the new president, who proposed the naming of a committee for that purpose. The plan would include the keeping of a permanent record of the association and a compilation of its history.

Music for the occasion was played by the Phoenix Band.

Weighted With Stones

Brattleboro, Vt., Sept. 7 (AP)—Police Chief D. Edward Conson today reported a body found Wednesday in Connecticut river had been identified through a fingerprint check at Washington as that of Fred Sore, a native of Springfield, Mass. Conson said the pockets of the dead man were weighted with stones.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those painful, nagging, painful backache people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired muscles—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisons out of the blood. Most people pass about 2 pints a day of about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or severe passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. If the 10 pints of urine tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 10 pints of urine tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Dutchess Probes Gambling Racket

A clamorous gambling syndicate, which moved about Dutchess county paying for the privilege of running gambling lay-outs at clambakes during the past few weeks—a syndicate which counted among its customers two Democratic organization clambakes—was under investigation today by city police and the district attorney's office.

The surprising ramifications of the Canora sidewalk hold-up case, says the Poughkeepsie Star, is that the Poughkeepsie Star, in James Canora, 26, machinist, of 11 Mt. Carmel Place, and his first cousin and brother-in-law, Frank Canora, 24, coal man of 62 North Bridge street, talked plenty about the local gambling syndicate when they were picked up yesterday on first degree robbery charges.

They are accused jointly of robbing Mrs. Dora Meimling, 45, of 165 Cannon street, of approximately $250 the early morning of August 29 in Cannon street. The money, according to the stories of various principals, belonged to Malcolm DuBois, her companion, and constituted the "bank" or "take" from the Poughkeepsie Country Club clambake of Sunday, August 28. DuBois and a friend, authorities say, bought the concession to run a gambling lay-out at the country club bake, but were excused from paying for it because they claimed the games were unprofitable to them.

City Will Have Dress Industry

Announcement today of chartering proceedings at Albany of a concern to be known as the Excelsior Manufacturing Corporation indicated that Kingston will have a new industry within the near future.

A dispatch today to The Freeman stated that Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn, announced the chartering of the Excelsior Manufacturing Corporation of Kingston to deal in apparel with $5,000 capital divided into shares of common stock with $100 par value.

According to the dispatch, the directors, who each subscribe to one share of stock are N. J. and Joseph M. Fowler of 236 Clinton avenue and May Wilgus of Saugerties, Fowler and Connolly of 295 Wall street and the State Department for the firm, the dispatch said.

Judge Fowler stated this morning that he could not disclose the names of those who are members of the firm at this time and that his name, that of his son and May Wilgus, clerk in the office of Fowler and Connolly, were used temporarily in lieu of the firm members.

It is understood that the factory will be located in the former American Cigar Factory building at Broadway and Pine Grove avenue and that it will manufacture dresses. It is expected that it will start first on a humble basis and increase production gradually.

Information was not available as to the number of people who may be employed by the concern or just when it will start. It was believed, however, that the corporation will be ready to begin operations some time next month.

Small Paintings Exhibited At Gallery In Woodstock

Woodstock, Sept. 7.—An exhibition of small paintings, priced under $100, opened in the gallery of the Woodstock Artists Association Saturday, launched by one of the informal receptions which have been conducted for the opening of each show this year. The show will continue through September 14, after which there will be one more show this season. The last show will be a no-jury exhibit.

As in previous shows this summer the exhibition presents the work of many schools of painting and introduces new names in the list of exhibiting artists. Not for many years have so many newcomers acquainted the Woodstock public with their work. More out-of-town artists have exhibited this summer than in previous seasons, some from Kingston, Catskill and other neighboring towns. A more flexible schedule, better equipped gallery, and more democratic policies of the association are largely responsible for this broadened program, which has brought together a comprehensive cross-section of the best that Woodstock has to offer in the way of painting and sculpture.

The complete catalogue of works exhibited is as follows: Marianne Appel, "Cabin," "Spring Landscape"; John Banks, "Fish Huts," "Jim Twadell" (bas relief); Deulah Bettersworth, "Victorian Silver"; Tode Brower, "Coco Palms"; Albert Brugger, "Flowers," "Windy Day"; Paul Burlin, "Quick Lunch"; Jo Cantine, "Bowl of Flowers," "Fishermen"; Anna Carolan, "Shady Lane," "Willows," "Gloucester"; Florence Cramer, "Tortilla," "Landscape," "Barges," "Pierrot"; Peggy Dadds, "Tara-ra Boom-de-aye," "By the Sea"; Edward Edwards, "Landscape With Poplars," "Oyaho Creek," "Harvey Fite," "Marcella" (Sculpture); Karl E. ## OFFICE CAT

CAT-SEP 8. mkb dhsrb lo
Many of the world's problems are solved each day by cronies on the street corners. The sad part about the solutions is this: None of the decisions get out of town.

It was an opening appearance of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, with Stakowski at his most majestic. The music was crashing and thunderous, when suddenly there fell an abrupt and complete silence, beginning a brief but absolute rest in music. Out of the still night, there came a high-pitched, feminine voice, full or reproach—and finally:

"But I always," it said, "try mine in lard."

Bachelor (dreamily)—Sometimes I yearn for the peace and comfort of married life.
Married Friend (wisfully)—I always do.

Sign seen in a printing office:
"We require a deposit of 50 per cent from customers we don't know, and 100 per cent from some we do know."

Fred and Mildred had been playing one of those old-fashioned games with forfeits, and the girl had been ordered to give the young man 10 kisses:

Mildred (pausing for breath)—Let's see, that's seven, isn't it?
Fred (correcting)—Only six.
Mildred—Seven, I think.
Fred (persisting)—No, six.
Mildred—Seven!

Fred—Six!
Mildred (wearily)—Look here, sooner than have an argument, we had better start all over again.

It isn't always good luck to pick up hairpins in the street, regarded of the old adage. A local man picked up one the other day and put it in his pocket and when his wife discovered it as she was preparing to send his trousers to the cleaners, there was quite an argument as to how it got there and he tells us his wife isn't thoroughly convinced yet that he was telling the truth.

Quiggle—Why it it that you women always insist on having the last word?

Mrs. Quiggle—We don't. The only reason that we get it is that we always have a dozen arguments left when you stupid men are all run out.

Read It Or Not:
All the gold mined in the world since Columbus discovered America would amount to about $41,850,000,000 or enough to pay our national debt with a little change left over.

Junior, on his ninth birthday, had a party. It was all over, and he was now gazing wistfully at the remains of the cake.

Junior—Mother, dear, may I have a piece of cake—only a small piece, please?

Mother—No, dear. You have had quite enough.

Junior—Well, may I sleep with a bit under my pillow?

Mother—Very well, here you are, and remember to keep it under your pillow. Now run along, to bed, dear.

On going up to Junior's room, a talk by Sterling Fisher, director of the education department of the Columbia Broadcasting Company, Woodstock schools opened on Tuesday, September 7, when more than 200 children returned to their classes in the seven schools of the town.

WOODSTOCK

John Nichols, Jr., is leaving for Connecticut where he will stay with his grandmother during the school year.

At recent meetings the Woodstock Country Club has elected five members to the board of governors, and re-elected last year's officers. Members on the board of governors are Clarence J. McCarthy, Miska Petersham, George Sprick, of Kingston, Frederick Stallforth, and George A. Neher, of Ollers are Holly Gantline, president; Carl Erie Lindlin, vice president; William Terwilliger, treasurer, and Charles Gradwell, secretary.

Church Layman spent the holiday week-end at home, accompanied by Jack Murphy, his schoolmate at Tufts College, who was his house guest at the home of Mr. Layman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Layman.

Mrs. George Neher was winner of the prize for crocheted bedspread in the County Fair, not Mrs. George Layman, as was announced here last week.

The Ivan Summers are leaving for Missouri where Mary Adaline Summers will attend college this fall. From there Mr. and Mrs. Summers, accompanied by their son, Carol Summers, will go on to Memphis for a few months.

Dr. William K. Gregory and Mrs. Gregory spent the week-end in Woodstock.

The Douglas Draks have left for their home in Philadelphia after a summer spent in Woodstock.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fen spent the Labor Day week-end here.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hopf, who returned recently to their summer home here after a few weeks vacation in Woodstock.

The Woodstock Volunteer Fire Co. extinguished a chimney fire in the cottage behind the home of Mrs. Eleanor Lamb Saturday.

The fire was not serious but both engines responded to the call as the house is closely surrounded by other buildings.

George Ludins spent the week-end in Woodstock as the guest of his brother, Eugene Ludins.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Mulloy spent the week-end here, honeymooning after their wedding August 29 in New London, Conn.

The bride was formerly Miss Madeleine Louise Cheney, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George P. Cheney of New London. The couple will make their home in Miami following the honeymoon.

A costume picnic supper was enjoyed Sunday evening by several hundred Woodstock artists and their friends at the home of Wilna Hervey and Nan Mason in Bearsville. Picnic bonfires and bright moonlight illuminated a scene gay with impromptu orchestras and choruses enjoyed by the many gaily clad guests as they gathered in family groups for their outdoor supper. The picnic was a benefit for the Woodstock Art Gallery.

The annual picnic of the Woodstock Historical Society was held on the lawn of the James T. Shotwell estate on Friday evening.

The basket picnic was followed by a talk by Sterling Fisher, director of the education department of the Columbia Broadcasting Company.

Woodstock schools opened on Tuesday, September 7, when more than 200 children returned to their classes in the seven schools of the town.

Almer Case Put Over to Sept. 14

An adjournment was taken until next Wednesday, September 14, for the hearing of Edward Almer, Bronx butcher who is charged with driving a car while under the influence of liquor. The Almer car, proceeding north to Hunter, struck three other machines when he pulled out of line on route 9-W near Lake Katrine. State Trooper Arthur Reilly arrested Almer on a charge of driving while intoxicated and the hearing was set down for yesterday before Justice John Watzka at East Kingston.

Wednesday afternoon the hearing was adjourned until next week and the defendant demanded a jury trial.

Two people were slightly injured in the accident.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will love you to dance and parties. BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "tired" girls. When they go to parties they want girls who are full of pep. So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 4 generations one woman has told another how to get "smiling" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders. You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Knew His Bike

Schenectady, N. Y. (UP)—John Manning knows his bicycle when he sees it. Stolen from him 12 months ago, John saw a youth riding proudly up the street on what looked suspiciously like his "bike." He called police. The youth confessed stealing the vehicle while John was at school.

Finding of Gold Led to Various Uses of Metals

When primitive man first noticed little yellow pellets of gold in the streams, and found that they could be hammered into any shape required and did not tarnish, he made his first step in the art of making use of metals. That was probably more than 10,000 years ago, says a writer in London Answers magazine.

The next step was the discovery of a red "stone" with a fine luster, that could be hammered, made a nice ornament, and was better for cutting than mere stone. That was copper, which in some places is found in the "native" state—that is, in metallic form. That was probably about 5,000 years ago.

They found copper could be melted and cast, and when they happened to mix a little tinstone with it, they found it much harder, and far better for cutting. If the copper was mixed by chance with some zinc ore, the result was called brass.

Metallic iron has been known from the dawn of culture in the form of meteorites. This, of course, was very precious, and formed the material for the magic swords of history, which never corroded, because meteoric iron usually contains traces of nickel, which prevents it from rusting.

About the end of the Bronze age men began to produce iron from its ores, and so the iron age began. The men of this age, having better swords and spears than those who had not yet iron, became the dominant races.

They found that by making the iron very hot and hammering it, and then cooling, and then repeating the treatment, and by suddenly quenching it when hot, they obtained wrought iron and the art of tempering.

Goody Rosen, Brooklyn's swift freshman outfielder, came in his belligerent facial expression legitimately. He's a Toronto boy, and played plenty of hockey as a kid, but it was in a good old American football scrimmage that he received the broken nose which gives him his fighting face as a big league leadoff man.

"Quick-dissolving Jack Frost is tops for preserving!"

GRAPE CONSERVE

(Makes about 6 half-pint jars)

3 pounds ripe Concord grapes, seeds removed
2 1/2 pounds (5 cups) Jack Frost Granulated Sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup chopped nut meats

1. Wash ripe grapes, pulp them and save skins.
2. Cook pulp 15 minutes and put through colander to remove seeds.
3. Add skins to seeded pulp and weigh.

Off To School!

Few and far between are the little red schoolhouses that were the subject of many a poem and song. Gone also are the cartoons depicting "Johnny" with a toothache which prevented school attendance. Radios, moving pictures, sightseeing jaunts and factory tours make school attendance more fun today than vacation time. In fact, hundreds of kiddies attend vacation school—just for the fun of it.

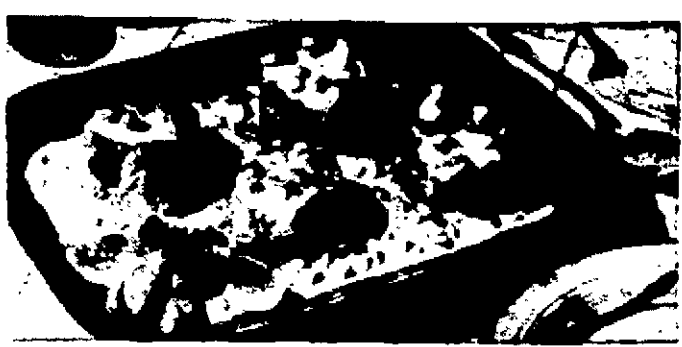

But with the ringing of the school bell, we homemakers know there's another job in store for us—for the kiddies must have more wholesome meals to keep them healthy in body as well as in mind.

So mothers of school kiddies, do start anew to plan balanced healthful meals for your school-age youngsters. This means starting the day off with a hearty, nourishing breakfast—fruit or fruit juice, a bowl of hot or cold cereal with cream, toast or muffins and a glass of milk. Substitute eggs in some form for the cereal two or three times a week. During cold weather a hot milk drink might be served.

We Plan Lunches for a Week

Hot Dish: Cocoa; chicken, tomato, vegetable or beef soup; malted milk.

Sandwiches: Breads—white, whole wheat, cracked wheat, raisin, date and nut, oatmeal, graham and rye. Fillings: mince, ham, chopped egg, salmon, peanut butter, jelly, banana-peanut butter, honey-nut, cream cheese-pineapple, American cheese, cheese spreads, sliced cold meats, corned beef, relish sandwich spreads and chopped vegetable spreads.

Desserts: Cakes, cookies, gingerbread, tarts, canned fruits, dried fruits, fresh fruits, puddings—capioca, rice, bread, custards, etc.

Relishes: Pickles, olives, celery, carrot sticks.

The Surprise: Fudge squares, nutmeats, chocolate bars, fruit gum drops, figs, dates, raisins, m a r s h -mallows.

IT'S FUN TO PACK AND FUN TO EAT PLANNED SCHOOL LUNCHES

For Homecomers

If your youngsters live near enough the school to run home to lunch, serve salmon prepared like this:

BAKED SALMON ROUNDS
1 pound canned red salmon,
2 tablespoons butter, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 4 teaspoons chopped parsley.

Chill salmon thoroughly, then open can, drain liquid, slide salmon onto a cutting board and slice in four round slices. Lift salmon rounds into shallow pan and sprinkle with parsley, salt and pepper. Dot with butter and bake 20 minutes in quick oven (400°F.). Serve with hot vegetable sauce. Serves 4.

VEGETABLE SAUCE

1/4 cup butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 1/2 cups liquid (2/3 liquid from can of mixed vegetables and balance milk), 1 can mixed vegetables, 1/2 teaspoon grated onion and 1/2 teaspoon salt.

Melt butter, add flour and cook until the mixture bubbles. Add the liquid gradually. Cook until thickened, then add the drained vegetables, onion and salt, stirring constantly. Reheat over low flame for 5 minutes before serving.

Build the home lunch along the same lines as the lunch box—a hot dish, a crisp salad, bread, butter, jam, and a light dessert—preferably a pudding. Serve the lunch promptly to prevent hurried eating. Cereal with fruit nectar or crackers and milk make a good after-school snack.

Princess to Wed

Rome, Sept. 8 (AP)—The engagement of Princess Lucia of Bourbon to marry the Duke of Ancona was officially announced today. The 30-year-old princess is the daughter of Duke Ferdinand of Calabria, the head of the Neapolitan branch of the Bourbon family. Prince Eugenio, son of the late Duke of Genoa, was accorded the title of Duke of Ancona by his cousin, King Vittorio Emanuele, shortly after his birth 32 years ago.

Mrs. Sullivan, 60, to Punch Bag for 'Critics'

Boston, Sept. 8 (AP)—In an effort to prove her contention that she was not an annoyance to neighbors, 60-year-old Mrs. Mary Sullivan was slated today to give a bag-punching exhibition in her own back yard before a superior court master.

The master, Peter Borro, decided "to take a look" to determine if the exhibition was as "noisy" as the owners of an adjoining apartment house complained it was.

The elderly woman, who contended the exercise was necessary for her arthritis and that it was a noiseless performance, already was under a temporary order forbidding her to punch the bag between 9 p. m. and 9 a. m.

Dead Sea, Mediterranean, Among Saltiest of World

The Dead sea is the saltiest sea in the world; it contains in solution 22 parts of dissolved matter in every 100 parts of water. From the report of the government laboratory we learn that the Atlantic ocean is saltier than the North sea, observes a writer in London Tit-Bits magazine.

Tests were carried out to discover what effect the salt concentration has upon the life of the different seas. By periodically taking samples of the water and testing them for salinity, the movements of one part of the sea to another can clearly be traced. It is thought that fish accustomed to water containing a certain quantity of salt are likely to follow currents that show their normal saline content.

The Mediterranean sea holds in solution 3.8 parts of dissolved matter in every 100 parts of water; the Atlantic ocean 3.6 parts. The former is therefore slightly saltier than the latter.

The Baltic, in contrast, contains only 0.5 parts of dissolved matter, due probably to the fact that it is fed with vast quantities of melted snow, which is almost entirely composed of fresh water.

Bellflower Has Several Names

The tall bellflower, related to the bluebell of Scotland, has several other names, including Canterbury bells and bluebell. It is widely distributed, being found as far north as Ontario and south to Florida. Related species, such as the bluebell of Scotland, are found in Europe. Plants of the bluebell family are unimportant for medicinal uses or other commercial purposes, although they did find some uses for them in the old days. Alfred Lord Tennyson once wrote that bluebell juice (from the stems and roots) was a good remedy for snake bites, a remedy that the modern doctor hardly would use. The juice from the roots also has been used as a substitute for starch, and in the days when stiff ruffs were worn bluebell juice was in much demand for starching purposes. Since the juice is somewhat resinous it was used as bookbinders' gum in the early days. For the same reason it was considered excellent for attaching feathers to arrows that English archers shot with their long bows.

Miss Mary at Red Hook; Miss Mary Tubbs at Castleton; Kathleen Moran at Tuthilltown; Marie Rhinehart at Accord; Clarence Crispell at Walkkill; James Moran at Port Jefferson; L. Mrs. Agnes Van Orden and Mrs. Emma Bahr of New Paltz will teach at the local school.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

All Classes Show Gains Wednesday

The quite considerable number of judges of the market who have held that the main factor working against an advance has been the situation in central Europe, yesterday when a rally followed the announcement that the Czechoslovakian government's offer of plan for autonomy as a basis for negotiations. Securities in New York opened up slightly under Tuesday's close, but gained strength through the day and all classes closed with gains. In an average of the 1.61 points, closing at 112.95 in the Dow Jones averages. Ralls gained 0.40 point, to 27.88; utilities were up 0.01, to 19.46. All bonds were firm; sterling was stronger. Commodities regained some of their losses of Tuesday. Wheat at Chicago was up 1/2 cent over Tuesday at Chicago and gains at Winnipeg were larger. Cotton in New York was up 8 to 11 points; cocoa and rubber advanced as much as 12 points. The AAA announced that it would pay an indemnity of 30 cents a barrel on all wheat flour sold for export before 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Department store sales in the metropolitan area were up sharply the past week. During the past seven days the majority of the stores have had sales running about nine per cent above the same period in 1937. In contrast during the last two weeks in August the retail trade was running about 14 per cent under the same period last year. If the present trend continues for any length of time, and with inventories now 12 per cent under a year ago, the department stores are expected to enter the textile and other markets to bring their stocks up to more normal levels. Most of the store executives are reported to be of the opinion that the trend of consumer demand is distinctly upward.

Reports from many chain stores show that August sales continued to show improvement over the earlier months of the year, as compared with 1937 sales. F. W. Woolworth sales were off one per cent in August as compared with a decline of eight per cent in July. Lerner Stores decrease over the previous years was cut from 10 per cent in July to 1.8 per cent in August. Sales of Western Auto Supply showed a gain of 2.4 per cent in August, compared with a loss of 19 per cent in July. Stationery and hand from individual roads indicate that freight car loadings for the past week were the largest for the year. Estimates are that the total was around 615,000 cars, compared with 620,511 the preceding week and about 500,000 in the corresponding week in 1937. Exceptionally good loadings in comparison with recent periods, were reported by industrial roads in the east, indicating a moderate upturn in business activity.

It is business activity. The treasury will seek about $700,000,000 in new money this month as part of a program to raise about three times that amount between now and June 30 next, in order to meet spending commitments of the New Deal.

Youngstown steel plants resumed work after Labor Day at 46 per cent of capacity, slightly lower than was at first scheduled. The fabricating industry is finding encouragement in a gradual improvement in demand for copper wire, cable and other products during the past two months, although there is said to be an almost total lack of public utility buying.

The Massachusetts state wage commission has under advisement a new wage scale decree for some 8,000 workers in the knit goods industry which would bring the weekly wage for experienced work to $14.40, an increase of 65 cents.

William Wrigley Jr. Co. voted an extra dividend of 25 cents, payable October 1. A regular monthly dividend of 25 cents is payable on the same date. Brunswick-Balke-Collender declared special dividend of 50 cents on common. Deisel-Wemmer-Gilbert Corp. ordered 35 cents on common, vs. 20 cents paid June 25. Directors of Aluminum Industries, Inc., took no action on dividend; business has been adversely affected by curtailed automobile production, but outlook for the current quarter is good. West Texas Utilities declared $1.50 quarterly, plus 50 cents on arrears on the $6 preferred stock. Merck Johnson & Co. declared an extra dividend of 75 cents.

Sudetens Refuse To Resume Talks

To investigate the Machrich-Ostrau trouble.

In speaking of the Machrich-Ostrau disturbance, the general idea "how much longer is this to go on?" He continued, as one of the in the know of things, with a criticism of British diplomacy thus far.

"After Viscount Runciman (Britain's mediator in Prague) 111 days to orient himself, and then come forward clearly and explicitly and said, 'Are you willing to grant the Sudetens their just demand for autonomy or not?' If yes, then give effect to your promise—at once. If not, as in our hands of the situation."

"In fact, Runciman keeps dilating. The cabinet in London also cannot make up its mind. We had hoped at least that Sir Neville Henderson (the British ambassador) would return from London with something concrete and tangible.

"What did he bring? Nothing but words. Sir Neville, British and in effect told the German foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, that Britain might be forced to fight if Germany acted again to add the Sudetens to the Reich."

"It was indicated, nevertheless, that Hitler was trying to convince British envoys that the Czech government was not master of the internal situation and that, therefore, the Sudeten German minority could not be expected to act locally.

Pressure on Prague
Hitler's objective was said to be to get the British to put pressure on Prague to make maximum concessions to the Sudetens.

This was outlined by a government informant, however, before the Machrich-Ostrau trouble was known publicly.

"Speaking purely privately I am under the definite impression much direct negotiation between Britain and Germany is going on behind the scenes," he said.

The British ambassador, it was noted, was the only foreign envoy attending the Nazi congress who planned to remain for the rest of the week.

What the Sudetens want, said the spokesman, "is one complete section of Czechoslovakia in which they are the masters, where they can profess the Nazi weltanschauung (Nazi ideology) and where Germans will be governed by Germans."

The Czech government's scheme for dividing the republic into sections "so small that Germans will be spread over all three of them," continued, "again begs the whole question."

Elaborate Display
The party rally, meanwhile, continued with elaborate outward display. Addressing the nation's conscript army yesterday, Chancellor Hitler told them that their "spades" were working in the east, north and south, but especially in the west—on the French border—were playing a vital part in German defense.

Observers thought the reference to work in the west was an admission Germany has been perfecting new fortifications on the border facing France.

An indication of new measures against Jews came last night from the leader of the Nazi medical profession, Dr. Gerhard Wagner, who said:

"Jail has not proved severe enough to punish Jews who commit racial disgrace. In the future, the Nuremberg laws of 1935 for protection of German blood will be applied most sternly."

The Nuremberg laws provide severe penalties for sex relations between Jews and Aryans, with a sex operation or protective custody for any length of time the court may direct.

Dr. Wagner noted two recent steps to remove Jews from economic influence and to bar many of them from the medical profession, and said:

"Hitherto we showed typical German fairness and mildness to our conquered enemies. This proved wrong. The Jew abused our magnanimity."

Ross Is Held For Grand Jury On Gun Charge

Charles Ross, 35, of New York city, who gave his occupation as a hotel clerk, was held to await the action of the grand jury this morning when arraigned before Judge Cahill in police court on a charge of carrying a revolver without a permit.

According to the police Ross is reported as having stated he arrived in Kingston on Wednesday and roomed that night at the local Y. M. C. A. He is reported as having a .25 calibre Colt automatic and this morning was attempting to sell it in the store of Sam Barnett on North Front street.

The police claim that Ross was attempting to negotiate the sale when Officer George Bowers entered the store, and, learning that Ross had no pistol permit, placed him under arrest.

William Love of West Park, arrested for public intoxication on Broadway, was fined $5. Leonard Sweeney of Brooklyn, arrested on a similar charge, was fined $3.

Baptist Church To Open Sunday

After a vacation period the Wurts Street Baptist Church will open for its regular services Sunday morning. The Rev. and Mrs. Clarence E. Brown are already at work and plans are being made for an active fall season. The Men's Club are making arrangements for a very active fall campaign of service that will benefit the church. Services will commence with the session of the Sunday School with the officers and teachers present to begin actively to function for the winter season.

Reports Theft of Sculpture

New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—Miss Alrice Gosztony, noted young Hungarian sculptress, disclosed today that 27 pieces of her sculpture had been stolen from a warehouse. Miss Gosztony said 10 valuable oil paintings by French masters also had been taken. They disappeared about two weeks ago.

Reports of sex relations between Jews and Aryans, with a sex operation or protective custody for any length of time the court may direct.

Dr. Wagner noted two recent steps to remove Jews from economic influence and to bar many of them from the medical profession, and said:

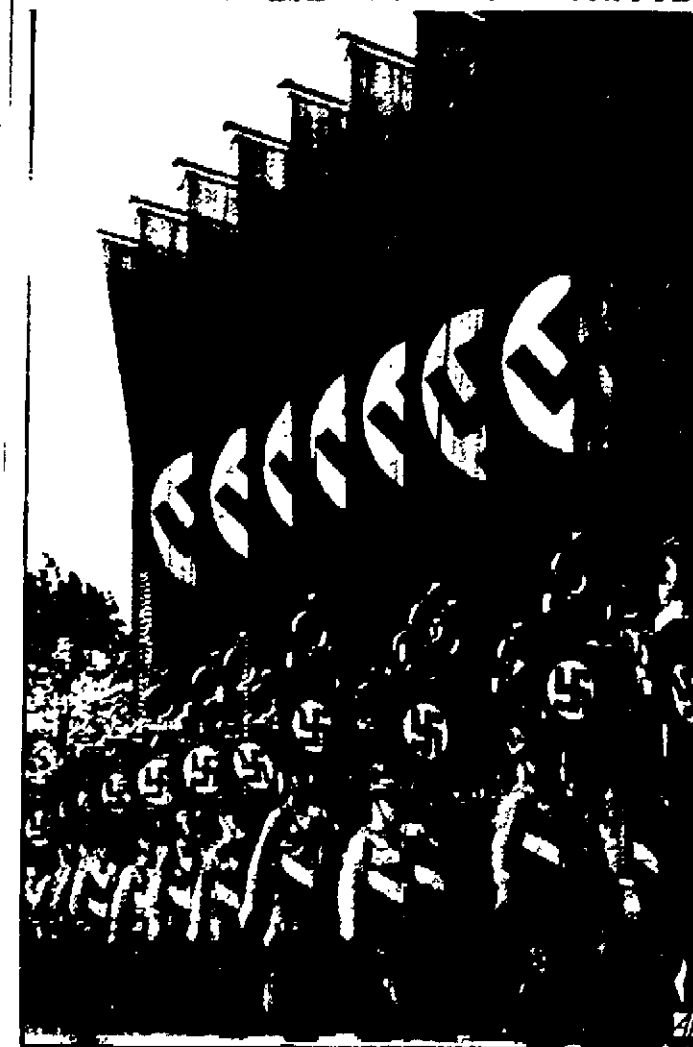

"Hitherto we showed typical German fairness and mildness to our conquered enemies. This proved wrong. The Jew abused our magnanimity."

BEHIND THESE BANNERS. INTRIGUE

Behind the banner-bearing pageantry of the tenth annual Nazi Party Congress in Nuremberg where these stormtroopers march was international drama involving Germany, seeking autonomy for the Sudeten Germans of Czechoslovakia; the Czechs, fearful Germany intends for them the same end as Austria; and Britain, playing the role of go-between for Czechs and Nazis.
